We had a great stay at Le Littre, the rooms (we had 2) were roomy by European standards, and the hotel staff was very helpful. Virginia (front desk) was particularly welcomnig and offered great suggestions for restaurants and travelling throughout Paris. The breakfast was ok, the menu became the "same old, same old" after a few days and we were there for 6 days. All in all, it was a great stay. The location is close to Metro and Bus stops and it offers many restaurant selections.

We just spent five days here on our first visit to Paris and could not have been more pleased. Our room 803 had a fantastic view of the Eiffel Tower which is an amazing site, especially at night when it lights up. Our terrace was great for relaxing with a glass of wine. Our two room suite was perfect for my son to have his own space with a separate bath.

Buffet breakfast downstairs was nice and plentiful.

Jirimi (?) and Virginie (?) at front desk were tremendously patient with our limited French speaking and made sure of our readiness for our morning tours and directed us through the currency exchange process

This hotel is on a quiet street but only one block walking distance from everything; cafés, restaurants, convenience stores, theatre, metro, currency exchange, shops and taxis everywhere. We loved being close enough to walk for dinner or drinks at night or just hang out and enjoy Paris.

And, Hotel Le Littre is centrally located to all the major tourist spots; The Avenue des Champs-Élysées, Louver Museum, Arc de Triomphe, etc.

We would definitely recommend and stay here again. There's nothing not to like.
